

WHAT IS A PSA?

The city of Philadelphia is geographically divided into 21 police districts, each led by a police captain. Within each district, the Department has created two to four smaller geographical subdivisions called Police Services Areas (PSAs), for a total of 64 throughout the city. Each PSA is headed by a police lieutenant, who along with an average of four sergeants and fifty-six officers, are now responsible for patrolling the same area, day in and day out, bringing greater community contact, familiarity and involvement.

WHAT IS THE ROLL OF THE POLICE DEPARTMENT?

The Philadelphia Police Department's neighborhood-based policing model requires that our District captains and Police Service Area lieutenants understand the specific crime problems in their assigned area and develop the appropriate actions to address them in partnership with the community. The men and women in patrol will lead the Department in these efforts.
